

Sinclair Broadcasting's decision to force their stations to air an anti-Kerry documentary days before the election is a clear example of the dangers of media consolidation.

Have you ever been witness to a dog that's been chained up his entire life? The moment that dog gets free he BOLTS in the other direction....no idea where, and not a care either. If you hide something from people these days, be it election worthy material, or masterpiece theatre. The people are going to think there missing something and want to see it even if they really could care less. Let the people decide for themselves what they want to watch. You might be suprised how few people actually give a shit and don't watch. THAT is freedom of choice. And that will keep them or lose them...what's your choice going to be?
P.S. You can't stop what's happening either way!
